

Please do not allow cell phones to be used in the air. I have been a flight attendant for 18 years and have observed the decline of respect passengers have for one another. I believe this would be an accident waiting to happen. Passengers can only handle so much irritation. If they must be crammed in like sardines AND be subjected to their neighbor's "cell yell," I fear the irritation will lead to more verbal and physical outbursts in an enclosed tube at 37,000 feet.

It might be different if passengers could remove themselves from the noise. In this case, that is simply not an option--especially on bumpy flights when the seatbelt sign remains on most of the time. Please do not allow this nightmare to occur! Thank you.
